Notes from the Conspirare website

In October of 1998, Matthew Shepard, a young, gay student at the University of Wyoming in Laramie was kidnapped, severely beaten, tied to a fence and left to die in a lonely field under a blanket of stars. Five days later, when Matt passed away, the world was watching. Approaching the eve of the 20th anniversary, Craig Hella Johnson has responded with his first concert-length work, Considering Matthew Shepard.

Led from the piano by Johnson, Considering Matthew Shepard showcases the award-winning artistry of Conspirare’s singers with a chamber ensemble of renowned instrumentalists. This three-part fusion oratorio speaks with a fresh and bold voice, incorporating a variety of musical styles seamlessly woven into a unified whole. Johnson sets a wide range of poetic and soulful texts by poets including Hildegard of Bingen, Lesléa Newman, Michael Dennis Browne, and Rumi. Passages from Matt’s personal journal, interviews and writings from his parents Judy and Dennis Shepard, newspaper reports and additional texts by Johnson and Browne are poignantly appointed throughout the work.

Considering Matthew Shepard debuted at #4 on Billboard’s Traditional Classical Chart after Harmonia Mundi released the 2-CD Set recording in mid-September, 2016. Audiences describe this work as “brilliant,” “powerful,” “innovative,” “dazzling,” and “gripping.” The Bay Area Reporter wrote “it has the richness, depth and complexity to compel repeated hearing, and the power to get you the first time out,” and from the The Washington Post: “Considering Matthew Shepard” demonstrates music’s capacity to encompass, transform and transcend tragedy. Powerfully cathartic, it leads us from horror and grief to a higher understanding of the human condition, enabling us to endure.”

Considering Matthew Shepard joins the ranks of many significant artistic responses to Matthew Shepard’s legacy. Most noteworthy is The Laramie Project by Moises Kaufman and the Members of the Tectonic Theater Project, which has been seen by more than 30 million people. Jason Marsden, Executive Director of the Matthew Shepard Foundation calls Considering Matthew Shepard “by far the most intricate, beautiful and unyielding artistic response to this notorious anti-gay hate crime.”

Matthew Shepard’s story must never be forgotten.
Notes from the Conductor

October 2023 marked the 25th anniversary of the murder of Matthew Shepard. American composer Craig Hella Johnson’s oratorio Considering Matthew Shepard invites us to grapple with several seemingly contradictory impulses: to acknowledge the brutality of his murder while also finding compassion for his killers; to hear deeply hurtful hate speech while also bonding to each other through love; to recognize that the figure we may see as an iconic martyr was in fact an “ordinary boy”; and to tell the story of a single human being using a multiplicity of musical styles and influences. As stated in a review from the Chicago Tribune:

"That composer Johnson has managed to draw this message from such a heinous act stands as a testament not only to his vision but to his craft as composer. It would have been very easy for this work to have devolved into treacle or pastiche – or both. Instead, Johnson has penned a straightforward, sublimely melodic, utterly unpretentious score, its music as all-embracing as its text."

In the opening Prologue, after a quotation of the famous Bach prelude that Matthew presumably played as a child, Johnson establishes a wide-open musical palette worthy of the plains of Matthew’s home state, Wyoming, and shares many of Matthew’s likes, dislikes, and hobbies in the catchy “Ordinary Boy.”

In the Passion section, Johnson borrows from the Passions of J.S. Bach the basic framework of alternating recitatives (here called “recitations,” spoken passages that advance the story) with arias (here simply solo and choral songs, in which the singer reflects on the story), Johnson keeps the listener tied both to the individual drama and to the collective response/responsibility. While Johnson evokes earlier classical choral music in several instances – most notably references to Bach’s St. John Passion in No. 9 “A Protestor,” and one to Benjamin Britten’s A Ceremony of Carols in that same movement – his main goal is to create a musical tapestry that is highly varied, accessible, and contemporary.

This variety encompasses country music (“The Fence (before”)”), pop music (“The Innocence”), blues (“Keep It Away”) aleatoric music (music with unstructured rhythmic qualities: “Stars”), minimalism (“I Am Like You”), and gospel (“All of Us”). It also encompasses texts from a wide variety of sources, most powerful of which is Lesléa Newman’s excerpts from her book of poems October Mourning (please see below for the story of Newman’s remarkable connection to Matthew Shepard).

In the Epilogue, Johnson invites the audience out of the grief and rage of the passion and into a community of musical healing, beginning with a heart-rending solo voice in #30 “Meet Me Here.” “Thank You” reprises the opening Bach prelude before launching into the rousing “All of Us.” A brief reprise of the opening movement returns us to Wyoming’s spacious natural beauty. In its totality, the score is, as the Tribune review stated: “...straightforward, sublimely melodic, utterly unpretentious...as all-embracing as its text.”
Notes from Poet Lesléa Newman

“Introduction” from OCTOBER MOURNING: A SONG FOR MATTHEW SHEPARD

On Tuesday, October 6, 1998, at approximately 11:45 p.m., twenty-one-year-old Matthew Shepard, a gay college student attending the University of Wyoming, was kidnapped from a bar by twenty-one-year-old Aaron McKinney and twenty-one-year-old Russell Henderson. Pretending to be gay, the two men lured Matthew Shepard into their truck, drove him to the outskirts of Laramie, robbed him, beat him with a pistol, tied him to a buck-rail fence, and left him to die. The next day, at about 6:00 p.m. — eighteen hours after the attack — he was discovered and taken to a hospital. He never regained consciousness and died five days later, on Monday, October 12, with his family by his side.

One of the last things Matthew Shepard did that Tuesday night was attend a meeting of the University of Wyoming’s Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, and Transgendered Association. The group was putting final touches on plans for Gay Awareness Week, scheduled to begin the following Sunday, October 11, coinciding with a National Coming Out Day. Planned campus activities included a film showing, an open poetry reading, and a keynote speaker.

That keynote speaker was me.

I never forgot what happened in Laramie, and around the tenth anniversary of Matthew Shepard’s death, I found myself thinking more and more about him. And so I began writing a series of poems, striving to create a work of art that explores the events surrounding Matthew Shepard’s murder in order to gain a better understanding of their impact on myself and the world.

What really happened at the fence that night? Only three people know the answer to that question. Two of them are imprisoned, convicted murderers whose stories often contradict each other (for example, in separate interviews both McKinney and Henderson have claimed that he alone tied Matthew Shepard to the fence). The other person who knows what really happened that night is dead. We will never know his side of the story.

This book is my side of the story.

While the poems in this book are inspired by actual events, they do not in any way represent the statements, thoughts, feelings, opinions, or attitudes of any actual person. The statements, thoughts, feelings, opinions, and attitudes conveyed belong to me. All monologues contained within the poems are figments of my imagination; no actual person spoke any of the words contained within the body of any poem. Those words are mine and mine alone. When the words of an actual person are used as a short epigraph for a poem, the source of that quote is cited at the back of the book in a section entitled “Notes,” which contains citations and suggestions for further reading about the crime. The poems, which are meant to be read in sequential order as one whole work, are a work of poetic invention and imagination: a historical novel in verse. The poems are not an objective reporting of Matthew Shepard’s murder and its aftermath; rather they are my own personal interpretation of them.

There is a bench on the campus of the University of Wyoming dedicated to Matthew Shepard, inscribed with the words He continues to make a difference. My hope is that readers of October Mourning: A Song for Matthew Shepard will be inspired to make a difference and honor his legacy by erasing hate and replacing it with compassion, understanding, and love.

The Temple University Choirs have enjoyed a rich tradition of excellence under the batons of some of Philadelphia's most prominent conductors. The seven ensembles comprise nearly 200 students each year, and have enjoyed regional and national acclaim for their performances both individually and collectively. Between the 1940s and 1980s the combined choirs performed annually with The Philadelphia Orchestra, and since 2002 have collaborated annually with the Temple University Symphony Orchestra at the Kimmel Cultural Campus.

Temple Choirs strive for excellence, artistry, and individual growth. They embrace both standard choral works and contemporary music from all around the world. In 1967, under the preparation of Robert Page and the baton of Eugene Ormandy, the choirs performed Carl Orff's Catulli Carmina with The Philadelphia Orchestra, a performance that tied with Leonard Bernstein's Mahler’s Symphony No. 8 for that year's Grammy Award for Best Classical Choral Performance (Other Than Opera).

Temple University

Temple University's history begins in 1884, when a young working man asked Russell Conwell if he could tutor him at night. It wasn't long before he was teaching several dozen students—working people who could only attend class at night but had a strong desire to make something of themselves. Conwell recruited volunteer faculty to participate in the burgeoning night school, and in 1888 he received a charter of incorporation for “The Temple College.” His founding vision for the school was to provide superior educational opportunities for academically talented and highly motivated students, regardless of their backgrounds or means. The fledgling college continued to grow, adding programs and students throughout the following decades. Today, Temple’s more than 30,000 students continue to follow the university's official motto—Perseverantia Vincit, or “Perseverance Conquers”—with their supreme dedication to excellence in academics, research, athletics, the arts and more.
